We Are Going to Have An Opera-House.

Prominent business men of the town are now getting plans for the erection of a modern opera-house, to be built here in the early spring.

Judge T. J. Ballard is at the head of the enterprise, and, when asked about the matter, said it was true that Lawrenceburg was to have a most up-to-date opera-house—second to none to be found in Central Kentucky. While it is his intention to organize a stock company, to be composed of the leading business men of the city, he gave us to understand that, should they fail to take an interest in the matter, and he was forced to go it single-handed, he would do so.

"IT" DID IT.

A Lawrenceburg publication devotes nearly a column to billingsgate directed at Versailles, which it denominates "Bancroville" Attorney D. T. Edwards, Jim Osborne and the jury trying the Osborne-McWilliams case.

The name of this sheet is "It," which is short for "What Is It?" After careful consideration, we give it up. We can't tell what it is.

The vulgarity of the attack on Versailles is no more than is to be expected from a sheet with so little dignity as to assume such a name. But the name fits, and the thing has fit; so, let it pass.—Woodford Sun.

After carefully searching IT through and through, we will say that we were unable to find but one word therein that savored of vulgarity, and that was VERSAILLES. To our offended readers we apologize.

It is now a settled fact that the Southern Railway will extend their line from Harrodsburg to Danville. The right-of-way has been secured, and work will soon be started in earnest. This will be of great interest to the people of our town and county, as it will not only bring us in closer touch with Boyle's capital, but cause a great increase in travel through here, and the running of more trains, giving us much better railroad accommodations.

There are various kinds of liars, but of the lot "Mr. Plaster of Paris" has them all beat—in fact, he might be called a unique liar. He will lie at the Court-house, Friday night, Nov. 28th. Along with him, comes a clever comedy coterie of comedians, attractive girls, specialties galore and the funniest play that is being exploited this season, different from most comedy productions entour. An attractive, special scenic mounting has been given "Mr. Plaster of Paris," and, in consequence, this funny play is seen to the best possible advantage. The costuming has not been overlooked, and the latest and most popular music runs through the piece, giving it a happy swing.

We sell Wall Paper as cheap as one cent a roll.

A Dog That Sets Fish.

A few days past Messrs. J. L. Bond, G. B. Hawkins, T. B. Ripy, Jr., and several others were out hunting and camped for dinner near a spring on the Kentucky river, and, while arranging things around their newly-made camp, one of their hunting dogs was missed. Failing to bring him in with the usual call, a search was made, and he was found gazing into the clear waters of the old Kentucky, as though all the speckled variety of the feathered tribe had settled there. A close examination was made, and at the water's edge was seen a large fish, which Mr. Hawkins succeeded in killing with his revolver. When weighed at Warren's store, the beam showed five and one-half pounds.

Have your room papered now, and make your selections from our large stock.

Mr. S. E. Booth, the popular superintendent at the Tyrone plant of the Kentucky Distilleries and Warehouse Company, has found time to assist the young people of that little town in the arrangement of the drama, "Uncle Rube," to be presented at the Waterfill Hall this evening at 7:30 o'clock. Much time and pains have been taken in getting up the play, and, knowing Ed's ability along that line, we feel confident of its success. The following young people will take part in the play: Mrs. Julia Jelf, Misses Nora Tuttle and Lizzie Hahn, and Messrs. Elmer Carter, Selley Hahn, Gilbert Stevenson, Geo. Roberts, Joe and Chas. Martin, John Hartly and Burton Boswell. Mr. O. Coleman Cox, of this city, will render original vocal selections. Several of our citizens will drive over and witness the performance.

Tobacco growers in all parts of the State are much wrought up over the action of the Louisville Tobacco Exchange in refusing to admit the Home Warehouse. At Shelbyville and Versailles, meetings have been called for the purpose of trying for an extra session of the Legislature to take steps to protect those interested in the Home.
